The Chanticleer

101 Years of Chronicling Life at Duke University

2012

Felix Wibergh, Editor

Welcome to a year at Duke

101, the Theme

Throughout the book you will notice a series of numbers ranging from 001 to 101. These numbers represent 101 unranked things Duke students have told us define their time at Duke.

How to Enjoy a Yearbook, or, What Is This Really?

One thing this year's Chanticleer staff has realized in developing the book is the difference between why students view the yearbook and why we make it.

Upon receiving their yearbook, many students blow through it to find their face and the faces of people they know. This is nice and good, and there is value in being memorialized.

In creating the yearbook, this staff considered what to include and what to leave out, how to put those pieces together into a thematic narrative, and – vitally – what aesthetic we wanted to emulate. Since this editor has a background in photography, we have focused especially on producing and assembling beautiful photographs. But even more important has been to design a yearbook that is as comprehensive today as it will appear representative 40 years, and more, from now.

We hope that you who view this yearbook and not only scan for you and your friends, but that you also take the time to look intently at and appreciate the photographs' aesthetic value and the layouts' capacity for creating more multifaceted depictions.

This book is an artistic and documentative snapshot of the 2012-2013 academic year at Duke University

The image shows the interior of a large Gothic chapel. The architecture features high, ribbed vaulted ceilings and tall, slender columns supporting pointed arches. Warm, golden light emanates from several ornate, multi-tiered pendant lamps hanging from the ceiling. Stained glass windows with colorful patterns are visible in the upper sections of the walls. The perspective is looking down a long aisle, creating a sense of depth and grandeur.

Excerpts from March 15, 2013 Duke Today obituary by Ashley Yeager

“DURHAM, NC - James Bonk, a longtime Duke University chemistry professor, died on Friday. He was 82. Bonk, born Feb. 6, 1931 in Michigan, began teaching chemistry at the university in 1959, and became so synonymous with the subject matter that his 30,000 or so students over the years called his general chemistry classes ‘Bonkistry.’

“But he was perhaps most notorious for the flat tire story, which went something like this: Four of his students, who had performed well on all their tests and quizzes and had solid A’s, decided to go to Virginia to party the weekend before the final exam. They made it back Monday just before the exam, but weren’t ready to take it. So they found Bonk, told him they had gotten a flat tire and asked to take the test later. He said okay. Test day came. He put the students in separate rooms and gave them their exam. The first problem was pretty easy and worth 5 points. The next question – worth 95 points – was more challenging. It simply asked, which tire?

“In 2011, Bonk received the University Medal for Distinguished Meritorious Service, one of the highest honors bestowed at Duke. A year earlier, Trinity College honored him with the Dean’s Distinguished Service Award in recognition of 50 years of extraordinary teaching at Duke. ‘Jim approached his teaching like a true craftsman, always looking for ways to adjust his approach or to add additional detail that enhanced his courses,’ Steve Craig, chair of Duke Chemistry, said. ‘Of the many ways that he has inspired me, that mindset that every moment in a class, no matter how brief, is an opportunity to create something of value, and the devotion with which he followed it, will be the most lasting.’

“Bonk was not married and he considered his students to be his children, which helps explain why he had no plans of retiring. ‘I will go on till it’s over,’ he said in a 2009 interview.”

Rest in Peace

A photograph of a Gothic cathedral tower, likely Durham Cathedral, under a clear blue sky. In the foreground, a large, vibrant green plant with broad leaves is out of focus, partially obscuring the tower. To the right, the silhouette of a person stands against the bright background. The overall mood is somber and reflective.

Program II

An interdisciplinary program of study designed by individual students to meet their unique academic and intellectual goals

All photos by Felix Wibergh

Emilie Marchetti
Mythology and Folklore

The program objective is to have a more complete knowledge of world mythology and folklore and its importance in human culture. The basic character of the program is an interdisciplinary study of relevant classes crossing the fields of cultural anthropology, religion, history, mythology, folklore, psychology, medieval renaissance, classical studies and demonology. Rather than just a literary approach to folklore, I approached my program through the understanding and analysis of the variety of thought processes behind folklore and mythology, particularly the supernatural beings, to better understand why humans create these particular creatures and how folklore is subconsciously pervasive, even in the modern world. Through the past three years in my program I have focused heavily on monsters and demons. The overarching motif has been the question, "What is Monstrous?" Although we create grotesque creatures with horrific behaviors, it is not the only form of monstrosity. Beauty, art, literature, science, and humans themselves all share an aspect of hidden danger.

Appearance is not everything, I found that the ugly demons can have good intentions while the real monstrosity is hidden under the beautiful. In the end it seems, "we make our own monsters, then fear them for what they show us about ourselves." Mike Carey & Peter Gross, The Unwritten, Vol. 1: Tommy Taylor and the Bogus Identity.

Neuroscientific Approach to Political Behavior

I study how people process political information and make political decisions by peering through the lenses of neuroscientific and philosophical perspectives of decision-making. I explore questions such as why do voters make irrational decisions? How does the President make decision of durable impact and how much of it is affected by his emotions, motives and previous life experiences? Why do people support dictatorial regimes? Furthermore, I'm interested in understanding the relationship between moral behavior and political judgement and hope that analyzing this relationship through the combined frameworks of neuroscience and philosophy will pave the way toward finding and achieving a moral politics.

Kelsey Woodford
Sex and Power: Gendered Relationships

I designed my major, Sex and Power: Gendered Relationships, because I wanted to look at the implications of nature, culture, and society on power relationships with respect to sex. Through the synthesis of my core classes ranging from biology to law to psychology to history, I have been able to assess my interests with my own varied perspective, asking my own questions and being challenged to think critically in over nine departments.

Bethany Bosley
International Justice and Human Rights Policy

My Program II examines the scope of international justice through a lens of human rights theory and law, drawing on historical and contemporary analyses of global case studies. I included courses that focus on practical and ethical policy approaches for countering structural injustices worldwide, and chose others that center on cultural and social perspectives surrounding various global issues such as human trafficking, genocide, and human rights abuses in wartime.

The Classrooms

A Gothic classroom? While Duke lacks this particular flavor of interior design, the variety of classroom style on campus – lecture halls, seminar rooms, labs, studios, lawns – and their increasing modernity set an exciting precedent for what we can expect as the university continues to expand.

While the Blue Devils end their season with a 7-10 record, ten of the eleven losses are suffered to teams ranked in the top 25, and for five games the team loses six players who join their respective nations for the Junior Pan American Games in Guadalajara, Mexico. The team looks forward to a strong 2013 season with 16 of its 19 players returning.

Rowing

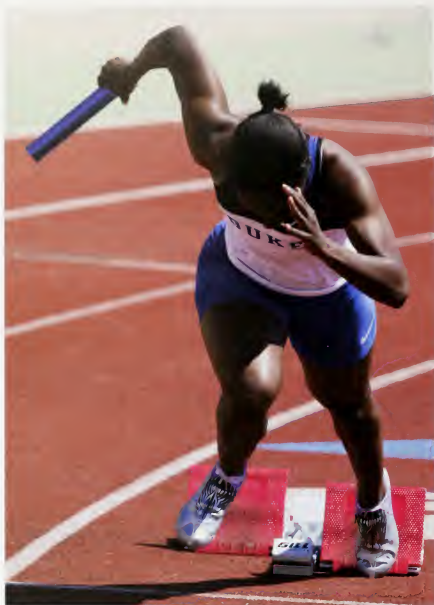

ranked 20th in the country, the Duke rowers achieve second place in the varsity eight and varsity four to take third place overall in the ACC Rowing Championship. Seniors Emily Theys and Laura Sciarrino earn All-ACC honors and freshman Katie Dukovich earns ACC Freshman of the Year.

The Track and Field Outdoor and Indoor, Women's and Men's, teams stand out with many extraordinary individual feats. Among these are Curtis Beach who at a single event breaks one world record (1000m at 2:23.63) and six personal records to become the 2012 NCAA Indoor Heptathlon Champion, earning what Director of Track and Field Norm Ogilvie calls "the greatest weekend ever for a Duke track and field athlete." The 6,138 points break both the all-time Duke and ACC records. Six Duke athletes collect All-America honors and all in all bring home seven individual indoor and outdoor ACC titles.

The Cross Country women (140-21, 24-2 ACC) finish in seventh and the men (86-45, 12-13 ACC) in 30th place at the NCAA Championships. Sophomore Kelsey Lakowske and 2011 National 10k Champion Juliet Bottorff earn All-America accolades after finishing 20th and 27th respectively out of 253 runners.

Written by Ibe Alozie, buzzer beater shooter (right)

Add some gold to the green! Mirecourt Basketball shocked the D world with a gutsy victory over Slow and White in the rec league championship game. Starting slow offensively, Mirecourt needed early on the offensive combo of Jarrett Link and Jeremy Clift. The pair provided a spark to the offense, and Josh Zlotnick contributed with his overall, consistent play including a last second layup to end the half. As the game progressed, Chris Ellis kept the game out of reach for the opposition with his scoring in the paint. However, turnovers and foul trouble gave Slow and White a chance back into the game, and it seemed they would bring the game into a decisive overtime. But Alex Keller and Jarrett forced important turnovers late, setting up Mirecourt with a final chance to win. The ball would go to the captain. As time expired, Ibe Alozie banked an off-balanced jumper off the glass to win the game. Yes, Mirecourt, we won the game. Yes, Mirecourt, we won the league. Yes, Mirecourt, we are the champions.

House Model

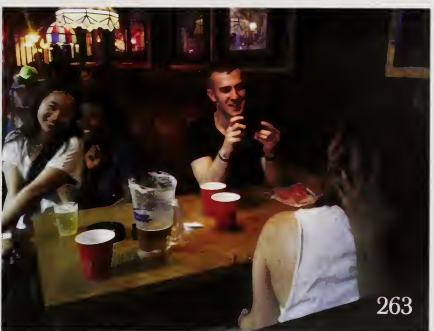

For the 2012-13 academic year, Housing, Dining & Residence Life (HDRL) reorganizes West and Central Campuses from a Quad to a House system to achieve smaller, more closely knit communities similar to the living groups that existed under the Quad system. All independent sophomores will be organized into Houses and given the right of return for subsequent years.

Common Ground

Common Ground is a student-led diversity immersion retreat program dedicated to exploring human relations in personal and powerful ways. Common Ground equips leaders with the tools to actively and thoughtfully promote respect and understanding of others in their communities. The retreat is funded by the Center for Race Relations and completely free of charge to all participants.

Epilogue

Letter from the Editor

Thank you for reaching the end of this book about a year at Duke.

On the 308 pages of this yearbook rest the sweat and careful consideration of a dedicated staff and – more importantly – the love, joy, excitement, trepidation, boredom, disappointment, torment, intoxication, and wonder that we, the people among us, our community, have felt in ourselves and seen in each other in the days and nights of this year.

Looking through this book I hope you have smiled, lost yourself in nostalgia, and felt a faint or overwhelming warming in your chest. If anything, I hope you have at least felt; then it was all worth it.

As I write this letter to you from my home in Stockholm, I – a far-flung graduate of a global university, alone and isolated in a Northern corner of the inhabited world – at some moment or another feel as if I were an island entire of itself, severed from the community I have come to love. While I do still speak with many of my Duke friends and expect to see many Facebook photos and read many listserv e-mails come August, this book has made itself an anchor, guaranteeing me an artistic and documentative view of the school that makes me feel proud to be a Blue Devil, however far removed from it I may be in time or space. Collected in one book are the successes, mundanities, and beauties of our school. It is a publication like no other.

Unfortunately, the yearbook is facing financial difficulties; for the 2013-14 academic year, the Duke Student Government has lowered our budget by over 30% and forbidden us from giving yearbooks to underclassmen free of charge. While DSG believes all seniors have the right to a free yearbook, they have not allocated sufficient funds for us to provide one book of this quality to every senior. Next year's Chanticleer staff faces the greatest challenge this publication may have ever had to endure in its 101 years. I hope that you hope with me that they will find a way to squeeze the funds without settling for poorer materials or fewer pages, and that they will find a way to quench the underclassmen's thirst for the yearbooks they are entitled to.

The Chanticleer is strongly opposed to DSG's ruling. As Editor, I was involved in several meetings with the DSG Executive Board and appeared before the Senate, but our interests did not align. As Editor, I hope the quality of this year's book and the renewed popularity of the Chanticleer will cause DSG to reconsider its priorities. Expecting money-strapped students to pay for their books is unrealistic, and transferring to an exclusively digital yearbook robs it of the very 009 permanence that defines it.

I wish that Duke and the record-keeping of its student life live long and prosper.
Felix Wibergh, Editor
